The College of Fine, Performing and Communication Arts at Wayne State University is accepting applications for part-time faculty member positions in the area of basic computer literacy in the arts.

Part-time faculty generally teach one course and occasionally two courses per semester. In the Computer Literacy area, a two-credit online course can involve 4 contact hours per week. To be eligible for consideration, a candidate should have an appropriate terminal degree. Candidates should submit a portfolio including the following: a letter of application, curriculum vitae, and a short statement of teaching philosophy of not more than one page in length. Applicants who would like their materials returned after review should include a SASE. In the letter of application, the applicant should state the subject area in which he or she is qualified to teach.
